CAMELLIA CARE

1. Plant in partial shade to protect from direct afternoon sun, at least 3 or 4 feet from any building or wall. Your Camellia can live for 200 to 300 years and will be a big tree some day.
2. Make hole at least 3 times as large as the container and fill with a mixture of one part peat moss, one part good garden soil, $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ part sharp sand, and one part acid leafmold.
3. Plant a little high to allow for plant to settle. Do not crowd with other plants, and never dig around Camellias. Protect in a cultivated bed with a circle of bricks or rocks.
4. Fertilize with commercial camellia fertilizer in Spring and if necessary, once in mid-summer. Always water well before and after applying fertilizer. Use fertilizer sparingly. Too much can kill the plant. Apply evenly at a distance from the trunk of the plant.
5. Water frequently, using one inch of peat moss on surface to help maintain moisture. Large plants may require very slow watering to wet the soil deeply enough. Be sure adequate drainage is given, especially during the rainy season. Water must not stand.
6. NEVER ALLOW TO DRY OUT.

All plants are container-grown. No root loss in "digging."

SHIPPING: Plants shipped throughout the United States in containers, securely packed, express collect. Send check or money order in full with order. In California, add 2½% retail sales tax. Minimum order $5.00. No substitutions will be made for varieties sold out unless requested. We guarantee plants to be true to names as we know them. Constructive criticism will be welcomed on methods of packing, nomenclature, and description. Right reserved to change prices without notice.
